About the Workshop:

Facilitated Communication Training is a strategy which may enable some people to point for communication purposes. FCT is not yoked to spelling although many FCT users do use spelling as part of their communication system. Options Communication Therapy and Training Centre aims to provide information relevant to best practice. This includes training in why and how to facilitate, how to fade the physical support, provide effective interaction tools and discuss the significance of validation. People who have little experience or understanding of augmentative communication may find it helpful to first attend Workshop 1(Intro to AAC) in the Options Training program.

About The Presenter

Jane Remington-Gurney was trained in Facilitated Communication Training by Dr. Rosemary Crossley and has worked in the field of severe communication needs for 30 years. She has been involved in the training and presentation of FCT both nationally and internationally. In 2009, she was awarded the Master Trainer Award from Syracuse University, NY State. She is an advocate for best practice and ethical use of communication strategies and aims to promote independence and credible use of FCT. Audiovisual illustration and a diverse range of handouts and resources are an integral part of her workshops.
